Information security

Discontinuities, incorrect data and abuse of information are fatal for an organization. Organizations are dependent on reliable information and information systems.

Continuous changing techniques, mergers, new forms of co-operation within supply chains and the ever growing usage of internet expose information to new threats, day after day. Customers and laws like privacy legislation or Sarbanes Oxley demand that information is handled with great care. But how and when is an organization in control of its information?

Nowadays, information security has become an important and substantial part of information projects and the daily operations of information systems.

Largos helps organizations to take the necessary technical and organizational security measures to protect information and get business risks under control, aligned with the business goals.

Procedures by Largos

Largos is flexible, both in the starting phase of a project as well as during the execution of a project. The small hierarchy proves this flexibility.

Within projects, Largos is focused on the agreed deliverables and realizes these conform the discussed planning within time. Largos wants to prevent surprises for its principles. Good consulting previous to and during execution of a project are conditions for success.

Co-operation with experienced partners is strived after by Largos, so complex and bigger projects can be fulfilled successfully.

Within bigger information projects, Largos is the specialist on all levels of information security.

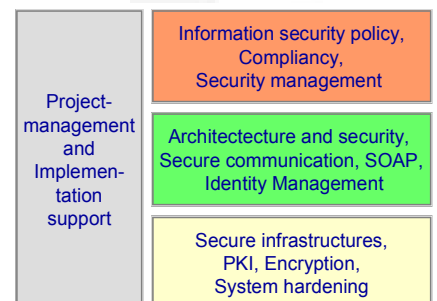

The expertise of Largos finds its roots in the security of payments, an information area that is subjected to the most severe security requirements. This expertise is used with success in other branches. The track record of Largos shows successful projects for major principles like banks, insurance companies, government, ministries and health care institutes.

Largos always wants to be a reliable and durable partner for its principles. Largos assures its independence with regard to suppliers so solutions can be developed that really fit the needs of the principle.

Services by Largos

The implementation of information security can be done top-down or bottom-up. Depending on the actual situation and the security experience of the organization an approach is chosen in consultation with the principle. Top-down or bottom-up, it is not a question of what is the best approach. But for a thorough approach of information security all levels of information security are of great importance. Largos offers services on all levels.

Information security isn't just a description on paper. Implementation and activation of security measures in the organization can be even more important. Largos provides the necessary assistance with project management and implementation support like training and awareness activities.
